A: If you try doing an import to a new database then it should work. You can see what it does on the import dialog. If it doesn't work for you, post what you are importing so we can see it. Q: What's a professional way to bypass video/audio stutters during publishing to Youtube? I'm trying to figure out the best way to publish my video to Youtube. Here's my setup: XCode 4.6.1 (8E1506) Simulator: iPhone 4S iMovie: Version 10.0.2 (13A603) I'm trying to bypass glitches in my video such as the audio and video stutters. I've tried cutting the clips and cleaning them up in iMovie, but to no avail. I've tried trimming to 20 seconds and still no luck. Here's a sampling of the audio and video glitches: Here's my publishing settings: Any ideas? Any other tools I could use? Thank you. A: You can't overcome audio and video glitches when you're exporting from iMovie to Youtube, as we can see from your videos. You are right to try and clean your video up as much as possible before exporting. If you want to try your luck at bypassing the errors, you can do as the tutorial says and add an effect called "Trim Duration in Seconds" in iMovie

In my use cases: Saving a backup file (MDB or ACCDB, that is) and restoring it Losing data includes losing entire records Losing entire records includes that, if you had a map or some other image in a record, lost the image, and thus lost the record, but you have the map (or some other image) elsewhere. Thus, restored backup provides no help. Restore a backup file Save any user-defined data (macros, forms, modules, or others) Restored copy is good to use, if you need the copy (files, data and forms, that are). Restore data from backup Requires access to the database file, and backup Might not be possible without access, unless the database was recovered with access, but the data were lost before the recovery References Backsup a Database Move Database Versions Recovering a corrupt Access Database up and make a life out of being homeless, it's not a life. There's no way to regain dignity by assuming that role." "He has lost a lot. He has been twisted, pushed into the sin of losing himself in these processes. It comes from a place of pride to me, like, 'I can't lose my pride and still live a decent life, and still see the dignity of living a decent life.' " "When we think of pride, we think of possessions. Possessions, money, credit, we have so much it may be hard to see that we have never known the true thing. If you have real pride, you have a real desire for certain kinds of things." "I wish that dignity could come from inside, not outside, of a person. But the more we know the more we recognize it. The more we know about the world and what's real, the more we realize that it is a spiritual issue. True pride, true dignity comes from within." "
