

An action RPG in the Lands Between, where peace is hard to achieve... A new fantasy action RPG based on the Elden Ring story that draws you into the perilous and exciting adventure. ABOUT BLOODY RIDE Bloody Ride is a new amusement park ride where you, sitting inside a mechanized "Bloody Seat," face the terror of sudden death on a gory roller coaster. It is bloody, it is thrilling, and it is fun. Other than that, there is nothing memorable about the ride. As soon as you come off the ride, you forget all about it, and this is the problem. Bloody Ride is a contradiction in terms. It is fun at the time of purchase, but it is generally worth nothing. So what do you get for your money when you invest in this ride? Why, waitresses who come around every 10 minutes to ask you whether you would like to drink and whether you would like to view the giant dildo collection. When you first decide to "sit in the seat," you are offered the chance to see a film that advertises the appearance of Tony Banks of Genesis fame. You then proceed to watch the film, generally in the same seat, in the same area, for some time. The film is presented via an in-seat screen, a closed-circuit television system, a mirror, a video player, and a vertical display screen embedded in the seat. It takes approximately five minutes to be complete. After watching the film, you are asked if you would like to see the Colosseum. It is said that in the popular area of the amusement park, the Colosseum is the best of the rides on the entire grounds. The Colosseum is a three-story-high wooden platform that slides up and down on rails. If you enjoy the ride, you are essentially trapped there, and once you get off the ride, you are busy for 10 minutes trying to find your way back. The ride is not a bad one, and if you can make it the first time, it is well worth the $5.00 ticket price. The timing is just right for the movie to be over as you get back on the ride. When you ride the bloody seat, you do so in a semi-circular, enclosed seat that is located in the center of a large, gory, blood-splattered imitation of a cyclone. You will have to spend at least five minutes in this seat before you are

As part of the operations and maintenance activities for the campus, a new three-floor, $18.4 million building (37,516 square feet) on the West Campus of UNC Medical School will be constructed to house the University of North Carolina - Chapel Hill's Museum and Art Galleries (MAMAG). MAMAG, a partnership among UNC Medical School, UNC Chapel Hill, UNC-CH Executive Committee on Museum and Art Galleries (ECMAG) and the University of North Carolina Office of Institutional Advancement (NCOIA), will house the University of North Carolina Museum of Art (UNCMAM). The art collection encompasses more than 35,000 works, with an outstanding exhibition and acquisition policy that supports the goals of the University of North Carolina Art Plan for Excellence. Over three floors, the new space will feature galleries of art that will support instructional, research and collaborative spaces, public programs, public spaces and academic support areas. "The new MAMAG provides an opportunity for expanded educational, public and academic access to our art collection and the Museum's activities," said Art Gallery Director Kathleen Higdon. "Our mission is to strengthen our ties with the University and the broader community through the engagement of our art collections and the rigor of our exhibitions. This new gallery space has brought us closer to these goals." The new space is opening its doors on June 15, 2017 with an inaugural exhibition, "The Lost Chord and Bridges: The Music of Eric Dawson," featuring art by Eric Dawson, an award-winning Chapel Hill-based artist.
