Description of Related Art A data transfer rate of optical disk drive of a data processing system becomes higher due to the increasing of recording capacity of the optical disk drive. For example, a speed of reading data recorded in an optical disk drive can reach 30 MB/s. Show that X is a subspace of V such that $V \setminusminus X$ is also a subspace of V I've given it a try, but my path is quite messy. I need to prove that $0 \in X$ and if $\alpha \in F$ and $a, b \in X$ then $\alpha a + \alpha b \in X$ and $a + b \in X$. But I don't know what to do with the first part. The second part is easier, but it is only to show that $0 \in V \setminusminus X$ and $a + b \in V \setminusminus X$ and I cannot see how to give it a try as well. Please help. A: I thought I'd elaborate on my comments with some hints that will hopefully help you. Let X be a subset of a vector space V over a field F and $y \in V$. Show that $X \setminusminus \{0\} \subseteq V$ iff 0 is the only element of X such that $\text{Span}\{0\}, X$
