In this course, online Photoshop tutorials prepare beginners to start their editing journey. Learn online the different tools needed to edit and create digital images. The basic tools include: - Photoshop is a powerful and versatile program for photo manipulation and editing. It enables the users to create and edit raster graphics, such as photos, drawings, and other images. It also has the ability to manipulate vector graphics, such as illustrations and logos. In addition, Photoshop also makes it easy to crop, retouch, colorize, and add text. - Photoshop is a layer-based image editor, which is not like other image editing programs, such as Adobe's Flash or the Apple iPhoto. The layers in Photoshop act as building blocks and are where an image is made. - Photoshop is a raster application, while Adobe Illustrator and Flash are vector applications. - Photoshop is versatile since it can be used for many different types of file formats, including photographs, graphics, and illustrations, among others. - Photoshop is a page-layout program, which can be used to create print-ready graphics and web pages. - Photoshop is not only used for making artistic images. Many people use Photoshop for business and productivity-related activities, such as creating documents, graphics, and presentations. For better results, learn the basics of Photoshop using these online tutorials to become a better photo editor. Learn how to: - Edit, crop, retouch, and adjust the color balance of images. - Create simple and more complicated graphics for your photos. - Work with layers and clipping paths. - Insert images, text, and other elements. - Align objects and objects in layers. - Create and edit graphics. - Insert shapes and colors into your images. - Layer mask, blending modes, and multiple paths. - Rotate, resize, and move images and objects. - Work with a selection. - Use Adobe Bridge to manage your images and find images on the Internet. - Print and export images. Pharmacological characterization of the G protein-gated outwardly rectifying K⁺ current in smooth muscle cells isolated from guinea pig urinary bladder. Genetic modification of ion channels plays an important role in the regulation of ion channel-mediated Ca²⁺ signals in smooth muscle cells (SMC) of various tissues. K⁺ channels are the major pore-forming unit of the SMC membrane and thus actively participate in membrane potential and Ca²⁺ signaling. We examined the Ca²⁺-activated K⁺ (KCa) current in SMC isolated from the guinea pig urinary bladder. Tetraethylammonium (TEA) activated the KCa current in a concentration-dependent manner with an IC₅₀ of 0.68 mM, and >90% of the maximal current was activated at a concentration of 1.0 mM TEA. The KCa current was reduced by the removal of external Ca²⁺ and was not affected by the presence of external Sr²⁺ and Ba²⁺. The KCa current was also activated by some vasoactive substances, such as carbachol, 5-hydroxytryptamine and angiotensin II. The properties of the KCa current in SMC differ markedly from those reported in other tissues. The activation kinetics were slow, and these currents did not inactivate. Tetraethylammonium and charybdotoxin, specific blockers of KCa channels, inhibited the activation of the KCa current. The carbachol-induced activation of the KCa current was partially inhibited by tetraethylammonium, but completely inhibited by charybdotoxin, indicating that the activation of the KCa channel is dependent on G protein, but is independent of G-protein-activated inwardly rectifying K⁺ current (GIRK). Cyclic AMP had no effect on the KCa current, although the adenylyl cyclase activator forskolin increased the KCa current slightly. In contrast, the protein kinase C activator phorbol 12, 13-dibutyrate (PDBu) inhibited the KCa current. The inhibition of KCa current by PDBu was not inhibited by pretreatment with forskolin, indicating that the inhibition is not due to activation of phosphoinositol-specific phospholipase C. The PKC-mediated inhibition of KCa current is consistent with the hypothesis that G protein-mediated stimulation of phospholipase C leads to an increase in IP

Q: how to pass a comma separated list to Html.DropDownListFor I'm trying to make a dropdownlist in which the selected option reflects the currently selected item (or what is currently selected) in a List(Of Int). This is what I have, but it throws a compilation error: @Html.DropDownListFor(Function(m) m.SelectedValue, New SelectList(Of Integer, String)(ViewBag.Lists(m.SelectedValue))) My list is declared as so: ViewBag.Lists = Enumerable.Range(1, 10).Select(Function(m) "Item" & m) What am I doing wrong? A: You should use a SelectList(Of.....) and not a List(Of...). It's by design that the Html helper has no clue what the content of the list is: Your list is what the content of the list is, and DropDownListFor expects the content of the list as first argument (and so, you would have to do something like @Html.DropDownListFor(Function(m) m.SelectedValue, (From item In ViewBag.Lists Select item).ToArray())) However, it would be much better to create a view model. The model should look like this: Public Class MyViewModel Public Property SelectedItem As Integer Public Property Items As List(Of Integer) End Class And now your controller action would look like this: Public ActionResult Foo() Return View(New MyViewModel With { .SelectedItem = 3, .Items = Enumerable.Range(1, 10).Select(Function(m) New Integer() With { .Key = m }).ToList() }) Then
